ney colt had begun racing his task was not finished until victory was assured. It seemed that in the last few strides Borel stopped driving Pennant, but with the shouts of thousands acclaiming the victory the two-year-old champion crossed the line a winner by a length. Southern Maid finished fresh as a daisy a length in front of Addie M. Bringhurst, pacemaker nearly the whole way, was fourth, a length further back, and he headed Black Toney by a length and a half. The others were scattered, with Forum, the early fighter for Mr. Whitney, in last position.

Pennant's victory to-day is the third he has scored in a similar number of starts, and he bears all the marks of a racer of which the American turf should be proud. Opposition seems to stir him into action, and Joe Notter, who knows the Whitney horses as well as any one

From the speed test at six furlongs the spectators turned to the race for the Saratoga cup over a distance of one mile and six furlongs. There was a field of four after the Beverwyck stable had added the three-year-old Ringling. Mrs. Vera M. McGinnis's Sam Jackson had shown his ability to run when other horses were tiring and he was installed favorite over Lahore and Jawbone, which represented the Talbott stable. Jawbone started of to make the pace in the interest of his stable companion and when the judges' stand was passed for the first time he held a lead of three lengths on Ringling, which was a neck in front of Lahore, with Sam Jackson content to remain last. sam Jackson content to remain last. Going around the turn Sam Jackson began to run and Loftus placed him second to Jawbone. Loftus made another move in the middle of the backstretch, with the result that Sam Jackson took the lead for the first time. Near the end of the backstretch run Ringling also passed Jawbone and for a moment it looked as if the outsider were going to make a race with the favorite. With half make a race with the favorite. With half a mile to go Ringling was only two lengths behind the leader, but Sam Jackson settled the race when he drew away to enter the stretch with a lead of five lengths. It was a gallop to the end, where Sam Jackson won by four lengths pulling up. Ringling finished the same distance in front of Lahore.

Alex Smith Cochran's imported jumper oot Boy was the victor in the Beverwyck steeplechase, which produced one of the best races through the field ever seen here. R. T. Wilson Jr.'s great chaser Penobscot carried 165 pounds and was asked to concede twenty-five pounds to Post Boy. With Weldship taking the lead the race was in doubt all through, Mr. Cochran's horse at times showing his last that the first the first the first the last that the last the old fault of dwelling at the jumps. Just before the finish of the first lap Penobscot made a bad landing and this left Weld-ship to pass the stand five lengths in front of Post Boy, with Penobscot a couple of lengths back.

At the end of the backstretch the top weight ran up to the leaders and both Post Boy and Penobscot were chasing Weldship in earnest. Wolke went to the whip on Penobscot as they approached the last jump, but Weldship was over it first a length in front of Post Boy. From there it was a drive on the flat, in which the Irish horse showed the most speed, and Weldship finished second, four lengths behind Post Boy and a length in front of

A smart field of sprinters turned out for the first race and after Spring Board had made the pace Flying Fairy, another of the Cassatt stable, outgamed the favorite, Leochares, and won by a length and a half. SECOND GAME.

The battle of Long Island was fought all over again at Ebbets Field yesterday, and in the presence of 15,000 eyewitnesses the Flatbush Fusileers, otherwise known as the Dodgers, were forced to surrender to the Bunker Hills, for the Boston Braves won both ends of a double header by the overwhelming scores of 13 to 0 and 6 to 1. It was not until the last inning of the second encounter that Gen. Ebbets's troops managed to cross the picket line, whereat there was much sarcastic cheering from the populace. As one disgruntled fan put it, the Dodgers didn't fight as well as the Hessian hirelings in the War of the Revolution. Col. Gaffney's regiment seemed to be better drilled, and also went into the fray with apparently spreader confidence.

regiment seemed to be better drilled, and also went into the fray with apparently greater confidence.

The ceremonies by the army and navy with replicas of two flags carried by the American army in the struggle with the British on Flatbush solf on August 27, 1776, were impressive, even if they did consume a half hour of valuable time after the first game. Nearly 800 sailors and marines from the Brooklyn navy yard and the battleship Florida together with about one hundred artillerymen from Fort Hamilton were invited to take part in the anniversary programme. Headed by Shannon's Twenty-third Regiment band they marched in a column of fours from the home plate to the flag pole in centre field, while 15,000 fans, all of whom paid good money to pass the turnstiles, stood up and cheered.

When the flags were unfurled and the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner" all but one man removed their hats. This obstinate young person, who said he had paid to see two baseball games instead of a parade and flag raising, soon created a small sized riot. He refused to take off his straw lid in spite of the fact that he was a target for all kinds of harmless missiles. As the bombardment increased he clapped both hands on the top of his head protector and sat down. Soon the management summoned the mil-

It didn't land, but the ice cream cones fell into a private box. The huckster punched back and was thrown into the box on top of the cones. A woman fainted and the crowd howled for the military police, who came up on the run and pushed the huckster out of sight. It was a great day for battles, it seemed, but the Brooklyn club got the money.

Southpaw Tyler pitched magnificently in the first conflict. He didn't allow a base hit until the seventh session when Collins drove a single to left. In the ninth Cutdrove a single to left. In the ninth Cut-shaw and Collins also hit safely, but that was all. The Bostons played errorless ball behind Tyler and as they batted heavily they looked like champions.

As in previous contests Allen, who began pitching for the Brooklyns, was the softest kind of a mark. He was recalled in the second period in favor of Bull Wagner, Pfeffer stands 6 feet 2 a crowd before. Freffer stands 6 feet 2 inches in his socks and weighs 200 pounds. It didn't take him long to win applause in spite of the trying position he found himself in. Pfeffer had good control of a fast breaking hook curve and when he turned on full speed he made the fans cry out in astonishment. In the last six innings the Braves made

The Braves rolled up four runs in the first period after two men had been snuffed out. Myers forced Maranville, who had opened with a single, and Lord was thrown out by Cutshaw. Then Sweeney doubled, Mann and Zinn made base hits and Fisheds fumbled Fred Smith's grounder. Jay Smith also made a mess of Rariden's roller, but his namesake was third out at the plate.

"Take him out! Take him out!" roared the crowd when Allen went to the mound for the second inning. Dahlen did nothing until with one out Allen passed Maranville, who stole second, and Myers scored him with a two bagger. Wagner then came to the rescue, although he hadn't had sufficient time to warm up.
Wheat made a superb catch off Connelly, who replaced Lord at the bat, and Myers was caught stealing third.

Ed Reulbach, the former Cub, was comparatively easy. The Braves got to him for fourteen hits, but sharp fielding kept their score down. Errors by Cutshaw and Wheat handed two tallies to the visitors.

Dago F. Will Trot on Track of Czar

CLEVELAND, Aug. 30.—Dago F., 2:08%, probably the most popular trotting stallion that has ever performed over a Cleveland track, has been sold by George A. Tipling to Will Caton, the American trainer, who for some years has been identified with racing on the European tracks, having his headquarters at Moscow, Russia. The price, not given out, is known to be extremely "long." Dago F. is at North Randall. To-morrow he will be shipped to New York and will sail for his new home on Thursday. If it is possible to get Dago F. in condition he will be raced during the international meeting at Moscow, which starts the last week in Sep-on Rule Observance. Pirtsburg, Aug. 30.—The Pittsburg Pirafes won to-day in the first inning when they scored two runs, giving them a lead which they maintained to the end. Robinson was extremely effective against the Cubs holding them to six singles.

The Cubs scored their solitary run in the second inning, on a single by Williams, a wild throw by Viox and a single by Bridwell.
Smith also was pretty strong, but gave way to a pinch hitter and was succeeded by Lavender after the seventh inning. The fielding on both sides was sharp in spite of the couple of errors by each. The latter part of the game was marred by wranglings with the umpire, who in-sisted on enforcing the rule obliging the pitcher to keep one foot in contact with the rubber. The score:

GIANTS' RUN MAKING SUFFERING A SLUMP

Average Less Than Two to a Game for Six Consecutive Battles.

CHANCES OF NEW YORKS

Must Win 23 Out of 37 to Nip Browns if Latter Win One-Half.

The Glants have a week of second division teams ahead of them, but unless their scoring and hitting are more wholesome than last week there is no alluring prospect of increasing their lead. The Glants had hard work beating the Clincinnatis, and didn't score freely enough in those three games to insure the same sort of returns producing a successful week against the Brooklyns and Bostons.

Beginning with the last game against the Cubs, the Glants made the attenuated total of eleven runs in six consecutive battles. That is less than two runs a game, a sparse output for them, for as a rule they are prolific run getters compared to rival clubs. This is the second lean hitting period they have fallen upon this season. On the last trip West they slumped at the bat, and taking their playing in its entirety from mid-season it hasn't had the drive and power of their stand during the first Western trip and the second Eastern trip of the Western teams. the second Eastern trip of the Western teams.

Nevertheless, since they returned from the West last time the Giants jumped their lead up to twelve games. If they haven't given any impressive demonstra-tion of hitting and scoring strength lately they have, since mid-season, so enlarged their lead that they have a big margin to work on, so that the setback in Phila-delphia was not in itself serious. Club for club New York with the setback. for club. New York vs. Philadelphia, they are better off than they were two weeks ago. any too strong, but the Phillies' for the most part has been less so.

Therefore the setback in Philadelphia was, per se, of small moment. The immediate effects of the series were slight when compared to the fact that the Giants had established such a lead that they could afford the setback. Not that they could continue to afford such setbacks, and another thing the results in Philadelphia have slightly postponed that period at which the Giants hope to have the pennant cinched. That period is further pennant cinched. That period is further off than it was when they went to Phila-delphia, although within a week they can regain the lost ground-also lose more ground.

The Philadelphia series did little more The Philadelphia series did little more than lend a fillip of interest to the first place race and isn't significant unless it indicates gathering strength by the Phillies and a corresponding waning of strength by the Giants. No great slump or spurt by either team is probable, and it looks as if the difference in points between first and second places. tween first and second places, would go on increasing and diminishing in turn until the end of the season, with no great effect on the security of the Giants' hold on first place.
